

Leading GB Siberian Husky Racing Team using 'Space-Age Healing Red Light Therapy' to help keep dogs sound and recover faster

ONE OF THE UK'S MOST SUCCESSFUL Sled Dog Teams, Coldfeet Siberian Husky Racing Teams, currently with 10 racing huskies is now turning to the emerging field of red light therapy, highly researched by NASA, to treat their team when any injuries or wounds occur and for proactive treatment throughout their training and competition season.

Pete and Karen Jones, owners of Coldfeet Siberian Husky Racing Team, multiple times winners at SHCGB Avimore Sled Dog Rally explain how the team has benefitted from using the new device for the past two seasons,

"We use it before we race and in between when they cool down after the race, the dose helps with their tight ligaments and muscle recovery so they are not as tired and stiff after a heavy run. We have seen differences in the dogs that have stiff backs or weak muscles and doing the treatments every day, they feel better when we check them over and they have more bounce in general."

Last summer the Coldfeet Team were able to experience the fantastic wound healing benefits when one of their females suffered an infected tick bite and another sustained a severe heel cut. In both cases the wounds healed brilliantly in less than 2 weeks and the dogs were able to continue with their training regime.

Red LED light therapy has been highly researched by NASA and is scientifically proven to help accelerate healing and recovery by energising compromised cells and increasing blood flow. Proven effects from these highly beneficial wavelengths are fast cellular regeneration, reduction in inflammation, increased lymphatic activity, increase in immune system activity, regulate collagen and natural pain relief.

Danetre Health Products, UK Distributor of the Photizo brand are proud to be supporting the Coldfeet Team with the latest device called Photizo Vetcare. Other dog sled teams have now invested in their own Photizo Vetcare after seeing the amazing results.
